In an effort to promote better health and community involvement, the Latino Health Collaborative's San Bernardino Striders Community Wellness program seeks to do just that by promoting physical activity, health and nutrition education and advocacy. More than just a "walking club", the Striders addresses improving the overall quality of life through these three components.

The San Bernardino Striders is made up of leaders who bring together at least five people for regular health and wellness activities and learning, including walking, workshops, trainings and community engagement. The groups are open to family, friends, co-workers or anyone else who would like to join a particular leader's group. When the Striders first started in October 2012 there were about 20 leaders but the number has dwin-

San Bernardino parents and students have access to new online tools

By Cynthia Mendoza

In an effort to do everything to empower and stimulate student success, the San Bernardino City Unified School District will be providing additional online resources for students to help them earn a diploma and go to college. A new program will allow now students to register for classes and track college admission requirements using the Aeries Online Portal, the existing system that provides instant access to grades and attendance data. It is also available for parents and allows them to communicate directly with teachers.

At this time, San Gorgonio has been selected to use the new features, starting with online class registration. The reason San Gorgonio was selected is because all students there are already registered on Aeries. Beginning in the fall, San G students and parents will be able to Like many other districts and organizations, the San Bernardino City Unified School District is slowly working to become digitalized. One way they're doing that is through two new components on the Aeries Online Portal, which at least for this school year, will allow San Gorgonio students to register for classes online and to track their A-G requirements, to ensure that the classes they are taking meet those requirements. The new components should be available to all high schools and middle schools in the district starting the 2014-15 school year.
